Rural Hoopeston man's thoughts spring ahead to autumn leaves

Falling autumn leaves are still several months away, but a rural Hoopeston man is already thinking about cleaning gutters - or rather, a way not to.

A relatively new product will keep homeowners from having to risk life and limb to clean gutters, said Charles "Red" Leemon.

The product, the Hallett "Gutter Mate," is a one-piece aluminum with baked-on enamel covering that can divert up to six inches of rain per hour, Leemon said.

Leemon is willing to demonstrate the product. A piece of the gutter covering held under running water shows water diverted down the curved surface of the plate. "If this were rain, it would be a lot more than six inches in an hour," he said. "And look how it's working."

The product uses surface tension and electromagnetic attraction to send water to downspouts and debris over the edge of the gutter covering.

Gutter Mate comes in four-foot lengths and is seven inches wide and can be affixed to old or new gutters.

Leemon became involved with the product because an acquaintance from Crawfordsville, Ind., Steve Hallett, designed and manufactures the patented Gutter Mate.

A bicyclist was treated and released from Hoopeston Community Memorial Hospital following a car-bicycle accident at 1:28 p.m. Sunday.

Naquala L. Rhodes of 321 W. Main, was injured when her bicycle collided at 715 W. Main with a 1997 Toyota driven by Maria D. Torres, 905 S. Second Ave., according to reports

Police said Rhodes was at fault for failure to look before entering an intersection and riding a bicycle on a city sidewalk.

Gary Warf, owner of Warf's Marathon, South Second Ave. and West Main, reported Monday that someone threw a piece of concrete through a window at the business.
